

21ST CENTURY TENDER MAN OF STEEL

3-10-09

PROLOG: Though his heart should have turned to leather
from the years he's been locked away;
and her care to despair, like a lovely, soft feather
under horses' hooves trampled in clay.

But their trials have made their love stronger,
through the fears & frustrations, through the heartaches & harms...
as fate makes some wait sometimes longer,
to finally find love in each others' arms.

1. A knight in shining armour,
a damsel in distress;
he doesn't try to charm her,
But she melts his steel — he must confess.

As they fall in love together,
though so distant 'cross the sea;
they don't even have to question whether
her capturing his heart — will set him free...

For they know! Their hearts already know, it will be!

CHORUS: A TENDER MAN OF STEEL
For a woman, so soft, so tough, so real,
a woman who can deeply feel...
I bow on my knee before you,
your 21st century, tender man of steel.

2. She let down her hair from the tower,
where her heart's been held captive many years.
He's been called to this very hour,
to awaken his power as their — consummation nears.

Though held a tarnished prisoner
for a quarter of a century past;
She's setting him free to christen her
his Bride, the woman of his dreams — at last!

And hoists his flag of freedom, full mast!

[REPEAT CHORUS]

[INSTRUMENTAL]

3. But their trials have made their bond stronger through the fears and frustrations, the heartbreaks and harms...
till fate sprung the gate: they would wait to longer,
to share their love forever in each others' arms.

[REPEAT CHORUS]

[END]

Written: March 10, 2009