

IF I DIE TOMORROW

7-4-14
(#69)

. . . In every minute ticking by
with every hour gone forever . . .

1. When you wake up in the morning
don't forget to kiss me gently;
So I can wake to tell you
how much I love you — every day.
And when I'm leaving home
even if only for a moment
don't forget to hug me, every time,
like it may be the last — it may.

REFRAIN: In every minute ticking by
With every hour gone forever
I'll pour my whole heart into yours
and tell you all there was to say . . .
For if I die tomorrow, without sorrow, I'll be sure that I spent all of my love on you today.

2. Every moment we're together
let's live it like eternity,
like the only moment we'll ever have —
it's the only time there'll ever be.
And never leave room for regret that we didn't say something yet
when tomorrow was too late, as fate
cancelled plans we'd never see.

[REPEAT REFRAIN]

3. Let's run through fields of flowers and get all the joy we can
And most of all let me give away all my joy,
into your heart.
And never fail to appreciate
each hour, each day we have together
And store away each other's love
for the times that we're apart.

[REPEAT REFRAIN]

[END]

Written: July 4, 2014