

IF THE SEA DIE -- WE DIE

If all the living creatures
in the sea die -- we die.
As the second malik* pours out
the vial of its plague.
Yes, if all the creatures
of the sea die -- we die.
There's nothing in the warning
ambiguous or vague.

The real apocalypse is but a revelation,
an uncovering of reality, purposed to reveal.
As the layers of history-to-come are peeled back,
they give an early warning of what lies behind the seal.

And if all the living creatures
of the sea die -- we die.
It may take a little time
but what a horror-time that time will be.
Yes, when all the creatures
in the sea die -- we die.
Those corrupting earth and oceans
are life's cardinal enemy.

Astound yourself in the pages of the Revelation sixteenth chapter -- note the coming judgment of verse three.
Then prepare for the wild ride surpassing all adventure
If you let the world's madmen kill all the creatures in the sea.

For if all the living creatures
in the sea die -- we die.
Life on Earth can't be sustained without the creatures of the sea.
It's sure, if all the creatures
of the sea die -- we die.
It's just a matter of time,
and but a short time that will be.

It wasn't prophesied because it had to come about;
It would only come because we let it come.
It is we who are responsible, by failing at our duty to hold back the tide of those who would destroy every kingdom.

But when all the creatures
of the sea die -- we die.
We could hold it off and live
if we'd only do our part.
So, when all the living creatures
in the sea die -- we die.
But the Author knew, what we'd do
--and wouldn't-- from the start.

If all the living creatures of the sea die -- we die...
