

1. Only six men appealed, while 6,000,000 others kneeled;
Giving their loyalty to the new gods of slavery.
Six had integrity, to a cause that keeps men free.
Where is that courage we need today?
It takes some real heart, that sets the fearless ones apart, both men and women, of that very rare and special breed.
It's not that they don't feel the fear, it strikes their heart with a sear.
It's just that they meet their foe head-on, anyway.

2. In your own life the time will come, when you can no longer run;
you'll have to bow or stand, and only you can decide.
You'll choose to do what's right, or your heart will yield to evil's might.
You bend that knee, and Yahweh's no longer at your side.
There is a wall of fear, sewn into the heart of every man.
It stops the best from being, all he or she can.....(be).
No matter where you hail from, you've been given the spark to overcome, crash down that wall, for either you or it must fall.

INSTRUMENTAL

3. We live in a new age of fear; a master the mases hold so dear;
in twisted hearts that feel no love, buried in their buried shame.
Each one blinded by their self-proclaim, 'hearts crushed by a foe with no name.
It's history just playing out its same old ancient game.
Will mankind break these chains of bondage?
—it depends on to whom they'll give their homage.
Man has sunken far too far, into serving other evil men.
Will the yolk of slavery, again claim the whole world in misery?
Can one-in-a-million stop this cycle from occurring again
—and again, and again, and again?
