

1. I'll stay with you till summer, sharing memories of winter, till the flowers in the fields, laugh their colors 'cross the hillsides.
Then I'll pack up my detached strings, and again follow those longings, after all these years seems haunting, that they still call after me...

BRIDGE

But don't you know, lady?

You must know by now.

If I'd trade away my destiny, laced with that sweet mystery, and change my course of history, if instead I could stay with you
--just till fall, through it all?

2. For now, softly lay beside me, say no words --they only hide me, locking up my heart inside a fortress, made of subtle stone.
Let's just be here like the twilight, as it gently lays its blanket on the night, the poignant night that fades my one last day with you away...

But don't you know, O, woman?

You must know by now.

If I'd trade away my destiny, weaved into your mystery, and change the course of history, if instead I could stay with you
--just another year?

INSTRUMENTAL

3. Tonight, we share eternity. The world is only you & me.
There isn't time, it's just a dream, we'll wake up from too soon.
Could I re-write this story, let wildflower-dreams fade like rainbows, bind my heart to just one lady, who makes all my dreams come true
--That's you...

Oh yes, you know

I know you know right now!

So will you also trade your destiny, mix it with my mystery,
and change our course of history

--I'll do it right now!

If instead of just one year...

[FADES OUT WITH SOFT RITARDED INSTRUMENTAL]
